Can you spare £1 a day
to help someone tell others about Jesus?

The India Rural Evangelical Fellowship is an indigenous Indian mission working in India's fifth largest state, Andhra Pradesh. It was founded 60 years ago by a former teacher, Prasada Rao Rebba. It currently supports over 250 national evangelists, both men and women, working in over 400 towns and villages. Yet it is estimated that there are still 10,000 of Andhra Pradesh's 30,000 villages with no known Christian witness. In many of these villages, the name of Jesus is still completely unknown.

Just over £1 a day is all it takes to support an evangelist and his/her family. Only half of IREF's evangelists are currently being sponsored, but they pool their income in a spirit of Christian love and fellowship. So there is an urgent need for more sponsors to come forward to have the joy of supporting the spread of the Gospel in this way.

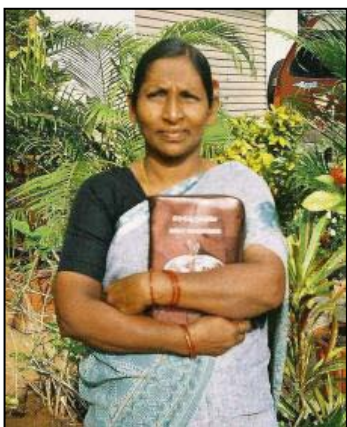

On a recent visit to Andhra Pradesh, a team of UK Bible teachers had the joy of seeing thousands of people respond to the message of God's love as they shared the good news of Jesus. IREF evangelists will be responsible for ensuring that these new Christians are properly taught and well grounded in the faith. So there is such an urgent need to increase the number of men and women dedicated to reaping and preserving the harvest God is giving.

Read on to find out more about the people you can support.

Khasim Shaik was brought up in a Muslim family, but heard about Jesus through an IREF evangelist. He gave his life to Jesus Christ in 1977 and four years later started work as an IREF evangelist. He is currently working amongst Muslims in his own village and two others.

Vidhya Saga Ambati was six years old when he was taken into IREF's children's home in Repalle, as his father had fallen ill from tuberculosis. There he experienced Christ's love and his life was changed. After graduating from IREF's High School, Vidhya registered at the School of Evangelism to receive training to become an ambassador for Christ.

Lalitha Kumari is a female evangelist (Bible Lady). Culturally, it is inappropriate for men to evangelise women. Lalitha was brought up in an idol-worshipping Hindu family. She was converted to Christ in 1975, and seven years later began working as an IREF evangelist.

Can you spare £1 a day to help these and others spread the good news of Jesus Christ? If so, please complete the Sponsorship Form opposite.

All the money you give will be forwarded direct to India.
